

The APA (6th edition) Reference List: Some Common Examples

The examples provided in this document are just a few of the more common examples of the APA referencing format. The examples are copied from the sixth edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (American Psychological Association, 2013) or from the APA Style Guide to Electronic References (American Psychological Association, 2012).

Some Common Examples

- Books
- Chapter in Edited Book
- Journal Articles
- Conference Paper
- Research Reports
- Audiovisual Media

Note that in these format examples, any sections requiring italics are highlighted in yellow.

ACER students are encouraged to consult an APA style guide for full details on APA referencing and for a very wide variety of reference examples. Print versions of the APA publication manual can be requested from Cunningham Library and will be delivered by post. The online guide for electronic references is available via the Cunningham Library catalogue after providing your Athens login. Help is also available from the APA Style Blog or via Learning APA Style.

Cite what you see

Citations are always based on just the details available from the source being used.

The Basic Reference

If after consulting the examples below and a detailed APA style guide, you cannot find an example to exactly match your reference, then the reference can be based on a similar format. Keep in mind that wherever possible, the reference should include these basic reference parts:

- Who created this reference?
- When was this reference created?
- What is this reference called?
- Where does this reference come from (Where can my reader find this reference)?

The title and volume number are both italicized in any journal article reference.

Audiovisual Media

Audiovisual media include motion pictures, audio broadcasts, television broadcasts, podcasts, and streaming videos such as YouTube videos. This media also includes static objects such as maps, artwork, or photos. Each media may have a slightly different format. Note in particular below the format for a streaming video such as a YouTube video.

The following example is the most common format for audio visual and multi-media and is illustrated below for online media.

Producer, A. A. (Producer), & Director, B. B. (Director). (year). Title of motion picture [Medium: DVD, video file, etc.]. Retrieved from http://xxxxx

Note: List the primary contributors in the author position and use parentheses to identify their contribution.

YouTube video

Author, A. A. [User name]. (year, month day). Title of video [Video file]. Retrieved from http://xxxxx

User name. (year, month day). Title of video [Video file]. Retrieved from http://xxxxx

Note: For retrievability reasons, the person/organisation that posted the video to YouTube is credited as the author. If the person's real name and user name are both available, provide the real name in the format of Author, A. A., followed by the user name inside square brackets. Otherwise, when the real name is not available, include only the user name, without brackets.

It is important to note that the location of the video will change the format of the reference – see this explanation for a distinction between finding a video on a website and via YouTube.

Recorded Interview

Interviewee, A. A. (year, month day interviewed). Title of interview (B. B. Interviewer, Interviewer) [File format]. Retrieved from http://xxxxx
